APRIL 2026 NEWSLETTER

Dear Friends of Community Partners in Caring,

April brings spring renewal and several important observances: National Volunteer Month, Parkinson's Awareness Month, and National Stress Awareness Month.

First, April is National Volunteer Month — a special time to celebrate the compassionate individuals who form the heart of Community Partners in Caring. Our volunteers are the foundation of our mission. They provide free, non-medical support that helps seniors and adults with mild disabilities live independently and with dignity in their own homes. Through reliable transportation, friendly visits filled with conversation, and reassuring phone calls, every act of service makes a meaningful difference.

Dedicated volunteers reduce isolation, support wellness, and bring joy and connection into daily life. Their kindness helps seniors age in place with grace and independence.

If you've been thinking about volunteering, we invite you to join us. Together, we create lasting change — one caring act at a time.

Parkinson's Facts Everyone Should Know

Secondly, Parkinson's Awareness Month is the perfect time to brush up on your Parkinson's facts. Here are 5 fast facts about Parkinson's Disease:

1. Nearly 90,000 people in the U.S. are diagnosed with Parkinson's each year.
2. Scientists believe a combination of environmental and genetic factors cause Parkinson's Disease
3. People with Parkinson's experience both movement and non-movement related symptoms.
4. Symptoms can be managed through treatments like medications, lifestyle changes, exercise and in some cases, surgery.
5. Early-onset Parkinson's disease occurs in people younger than 50 years of age.

Stress Awareness Month: Are Your Symptoms Stress Related?

Finally, stress doesn't just affect your mood; it impacts your body too. Chronic stress can cause real physical symptoms long before you realize how overwhelmed you are.

Common signs of chronic stress include:

- Body aches and pains
- Sleep problems (fatigue or insomnia)
- Headaches, dizziness, or racing pulse
- Elevated blood pressure
- Frequent illnesses
- Anxiety, depression, or panic attacks

Left unchecked, ongoing stress can harm your immune, digestive, cardiovascular, and reproductive systems.

But you can manage stress. Move your body daily, practice positive thinking, and set realistic goals. If symptoms persist, talk to your doctor or a therapist; they can help determine if medication or counseling is right for you.

This April, take a moment to check in with yourself. Your body may be trying to tell you something.

WHILE YOU CAN'T ALWAYS CONTROL THE
SOURCES OF YOUR
STRESS, YOU CAN CONTROL HOW YOU
RESPOND TO IT.

STORIES THAT MATTER...

STRONGER TOGETHER: ONE VOLUNTEER, MANY LIVES TOUCHED

Volunteers like Harry show how one person's time and compassion can make a lasting difference in the life of a neighbor.

Sometimes making a difference starts with something simple – showing up, getting in the car, and being willing to help someone get where they need to go.

Since 2019, Harry has been a dedicated volunteer with Community Partners in Caring. He generously gives his time to help older adults and adults with disabilities stay connected to the people, programs, and opportunities that enrich their lives. Harry especially enjoys long-distance driving, and his consistent compassion strengthens our community.

At CPC, partnerships with organizations like Blind Fitness help open doors for those who may otherwise face barriers to participation and connection. Working together, we are able to support individuals not only with transportation, but with something deeper: continued independence, community involvement, and the reassurance that they are not alone.

While volunteers give so much, they often receive something meaningful in return: purpose, perspective, and the joy of making a real difference.

We need more volunteers now. If you have compassion, a little time, and a desire to help others, we invite you to join CPC and be part of something truly meaningful.

The one habit that separates productive people from busy ones

Multitasking doesn't actually exist. What we call multitasking is rapid task-switching, which can reduce productivity by up to 40%, according to the American Psychological Association. The person juggling multiple tabs and notifications isn't getting more done; they're just busier.

The single habit that sets highly productive people apart is the ability to focus on one task at a time. For a protected block of time, they give one thing their full attention ; phone away, notifications off, one window open.

Work that normally takes three fragmented hours can often be completed in one focused hour, with better quality. Motion feels like progress, but they are not the same. Pick one thing. Do only that. Finish it before moving on.

In a world designed to scatter your attention, single focus may be the most productive choice you make today.

Spring clean your workspace, spring clean your head

Spring and cleaning go hand in hand — and your workspace is no exception. Clutter builds up quietly until finding anything feels harder than it should.

Start with the physical clean: Clear surfaces, toss dead pens, file important papers, recycle the rest, and wipe down your keyboard (which, surprisingly, often has more bacteria than a toilet seat).

Don't stop there. Do a digital clean too: Sort your downloads folder, archive old emails, and organize your cluttered desktop.

Research shows that physical disorder creates mental drag; it drains attention and slows decision-making. A clean workspace doesn't just look better; it actually helps you think better.

Spring comes only once a year. Use it to reset your space and clear your mind..

Change your Google habits

You've probably noticed AI answers appearing at the top of Google search results. It's time to use Google less like a traditional search engine and more like an AI assistant.

Instead of searching for separate facts, ask direct comparison questions. For example: "Is a glass of V8 nutritionally better than a glass of milk?" Google will compare them for you.

You can also ask broader questions like "What are the causes of..." or "What factors influenced..."

Just remember: AI works on probability and training data, not absolute certainty. Treat its broad or analytical answers as a helpful starting draft, not final truth.

The Follow-Through Gap

Most people have plenty of ideas, plans, and good intentions. What separates those who succeed from those who don't is rarely talent or intelligence. It's follow-through — the steady work that continues after the initial excitement fades.

The email gets drafted but never sent. The project stalls at 80 percent. The gym routine lasts two weeks.

The solution is simple: Write down exactly what you'll do and by when, then tell at least one other person. Public commitments dramatically increase the odds of finishing.

The gap between who you are and who you want to be is almost never about the idea. It's almost always about the finish.

WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR TAX REFUND THIS YEAR

Yes taxes are fun and if your tax refund feels bigger than usual, you're not imagining it. Early 2026 IRS data shows the average federal refund is running about 10–14% higher than the same period last year.

Before it disappears into daily spending, put it to work:

1. Build or boost your emergency fund. Aim for 3–6 months of essential expenses in a high-yield savings account. Even $1,000 can protect you from unexpected car repairs or medical bills.

2. Pay down high-interest debt. Credit cards often charge over 20% interest. Reducing that balance delivers a guaranteed return no investment can match.

3. Consider retirement. You still have until April 15 to contribute to an IRA for the 2025 tax year. It can lower future taxes while growing your savings.

Smart moves now prevent regret later.

THE IMPORTANCE OF VOLUNTEERING

Last edition we talked about caring communities. They are built on simple acts of kindness, connection, and support. Now during National Volunteer Month, we're reminded just how powerful those acts can be. Whether it's a friendly phone call, a ride to an appointment, or a few minutes spent listening, volunteers make an extraordinary difference through everyday gestures.

When neighbors step up to support one another, we reduce isolation, strengthen trust, and create a true sense of belonging. This is especially meaningful for older adults who wish to age independently and stay connected to the community they call home.

This April, in honor of National Volunteer Month, let's celebrate the impact of volunteers and recommit to building a community where compassion isn't the exception but the norm.
